My verdict for the puzzles and clues in the game is yes. They are well thought out and a testament to the time that has been invested in the game. My verdict for the storyline of the game is no. The plot is something that in other games is a big selling point, but this is not the case. The most that you get out of this game is a little message telling you that you are part of something bigger, and that you were brought to the surface to stop a world ending conspiracy. To me, a big part of the game is about the puzzles and the choices, but not about a big climax. In other words, if you are more interested in the mysteries and puzzles of the game and the game itself has no meaning to you, then I think this game is for you. good game bad ending 2017-07-12 100 A very good game but I do not like the endings because they never leave you guessing.
